

According to reports, the local jewellery shop was in Main Street, New York city. The shop window was smashed with jewellery everywhere. The two men were covered with jewels all over their black, smart suits. With sirens as loud as a lions roar, the police turned up with guns about to arrest them. All of a sudden, a mysterious creature popped out of the man's suit. The police wondered what it was but the man put it back into his pockets. It is still unclear just what this animal is.

Yesterday evening, two men, who looked like they robbed a jewellery shop in New York, were caught red-handed. It wasn't actually two men though, it was thought to be a mysterious creature.

Around eight o'clock in the evening, two people were caught by the police. It happened at a jewellery shop in Main Street. They were wearing dark, smart suits. It happened after a Saturday sale. Nobody knows what happened but according to witnesses it happened at around eight o'clock in the evening and finished around nine o'clock. When the police arrived, the two men, who were covered in jewellery, weren't there. Nothing was stolen, but the jewellery shop destroyed.

This scene unfolded at around 10pm in the evening. The police, who sighted the two men, arrived after the incident which occurred on Main Street. The men were covered in jewellery and the shop was destroyed. There also appeared to be a strange, mysterious creature on the scene. One of the men was identified as Mr Kowalski from the local canning factory, the other was unidentified. No-one was outside at this time so the culprits must have planned the robbery. Mr Kowalski, who according to work mates is a persistent man, is now on the run. Kowalski has also appeared to have been spotted robbing a bank recently.

After the police arrived, a lion, which had escaped from Central Park, distracted the police; then the men disappeared. Everybody is on alert for these two fugitives. During the commotion, Central Park got destroyed, which suggest this could have been an organised attack.
